Sometimes a person makes exactly the show they needed to make, exactly when they needed to make it. Sometimes the person is a gallery, but with works by Allan Sekula, Hans Haacke, Lucy Raven and Georgia Sagri, it's as simple as making a good thing out of good things.

The exhibition is personal and political, an old space and a new space, one dark and one lit, aluminum-coated cardboard and copper-coated zinc, a culmination as well as a beginning.

Zak Kitnick is an artist living and working in New York.
